The diagram illustrates a sequence of six operations, each represented by two vertical lines connected by a horizontal bar at the bottom. The top line has numbers above it, and the middle and bottom lines have numbers below them. The operations are labeled T, T, T, T, T, and T from left to right.

T	0	1
T	0	0	2
